JAMESTOWN'S RETAIL & CULINARY COMMITMENT

Jamestown has a genuine commitment to a culture of supporting and fostering local retail businesses, high-quality food purveyors, and an established history of attracting the best local, regional, and national retailers that will thrive in each market. This coupled with Jamestown's mission, to transform spaces into innovation hubs and community centers has resulted in creating some of the most unique mixed-use developments across the country, including the likes of Ponce City Market, Ghirardelli Square and Industry City. With 14 mixed use assets and over 300 food & beverage outlets, Jamestown has also emerged as an industry leader in innovation – housing and incubating top talent – and has established strong ties with the country's leading entrepreneurs and chefs.

Within the Bay Area, Jamestown's portfolio includes leading retail and dining destinations at both Fourth Street Berkeley and Ghirardelli Square. The largest testament to Jamestown's culinary commitment is Chelsea Market in New York City. Founded as a place where local artisanal food purveyors could sell their wares, Chelsea Market has evolved into a true culinary destination that is home to quality food retailers, internationally-acclaimed restaurants, and Food Network headquarters.
