TIMELESS ARCHITECTURE, MODERN RETAIL

Built in 1915 by railroad mogul Hulett C. Merritt, this ornate mid-rise landmark—renowned for its Roman-inspired architecture and white marble columns. Situated at the corner of 8th and Broadway, the property offers prime retail space within the heart of the district's shopping corridor, where thousands of visitors converge to experience the area's unique urban pedestrian culture.

Bringing Back Broadway is a 10-year strategic economic development plan that launched in 2008 for the revitalization of the historic Broadway corridor in Downtown Los Angeles. Initiated by Los Angeles Councilmember José Huizar, Bringing Back Broadway has been a tremendous success, courting local, national, and international retailers, restaurants, and hotels to the corridor.

“The initiative began with goals to provide economic development and business assistance; encourage historic preservation; stimulate reactivation of Broadway’s historic theaters and long-underutilized commercial buildings; and increase transit and development options by bringing a streetcar back to downtown Los Angeles with Broadway as the spine for the route.”
